

Space Racers is a children's animated television program that seeks to introduce early learners ages 3-6 to real space-science concepts and principles. The second season of Space Racers is set to launch November 5 on NBC's Sprout network.

From planets, asteroids, and rovers, to the concepts of observation, hypothesis testing and collaborative learning, the program's CGI-animated rocket cadets from Stardust Space Academy explore their fictional world, our solar system and beyond, while sparking interest in scientific literacy and discovery among the youngest learners.
